CoolSculpting Arms | Freeze Away Upper Arm Fat

CoolSculpting arms is the perfect way to reduce upper arm fat without invasive, painful surgery. The CoolPetite applicator was introduced in 2017. This special CoolSculpting applicator was made for hard to reach areas of fat like the upper arm. Read to learn more about subcutaneous fat in the upper arms and how this body contouring treatment can reduce "bingo wing."

What Causes Upper Arm Fat?

Upper arm fat is a notorious problem, specifically for women. This area is one of three that commonly gather fat cells. Genetics, age, and even hormones are contributing factors in the accumulation of persistent upper arm fat. Due to these factors and the fat deposits gathering in the arms, diet, and exercise-resistant fat bulges form. Women end up being embarrassed by the "bingo wing" or "chicken wing." CoolSculpting is the best way to reduce the fat that gathers in the upper arm area, making it one of the most popular treatment zones.

CoolSculpting Arms | CoolPetite Applicator

The CoolPetite is a new addition to the revolutionary line of CoolSculpting applicators. This applicator was made to treat problem zones, minimize any discomfort, and even reduce treatment times.

Mark Foley, President and Chief Executive Officer of ZELTIQ introduced the CoolPetite, saying, "After 5 years of research and millions of dollars invested in development, we are proud to be the only non-invasive fat reduction technology that is FDA-cleared to treat the upper arms, the third greatest area of concern for consumers."

Jean Carruthers, an investigator for CoolAdvantage Petite applicators, further explains, "The upper arm, with its delicate structures, is one of the most challenging areas for fat reduction." Involved in the research, Carruthers says he can personally "attest to the fact that the upper arms responded beautifully, and my study patients are delighted by their results."

CoolSculpting Arms | Evidence Supporting Freezing Upper Arm Fat

It took countless hours to thoroughly check the safety and efficiency of CoolSculpting arms when reducing fat cells. After treating 30 female subjects, researchers found that the treatment helped each patient achieve significant fat reduction. 85% of the subjects achieved visible reduction results. Moreover, these results helped conclude that "these data suggest that [CoolSculpting arms] provide rapid, safe, and effective arm treatment."

About the CoolSculpting FDA Approved Treatment

CoolSculpting, also known as cryolipolysis, is a non-surgical procedure approved by the FDA to reduce fat. Overall, there are several areas which CoolSculpting professionals can target. The fat pockets on a person's body can be targeted using ultramodern technology and applicators. The procedure freezes the fat cells so that they die under the skin. This is conducted without damaging or harming the skin. Once these fat cells are frozen to death, they are destroyed and flushed out of the body naturally.

Liposuction Vs. CoolSculpting | The Differences

Liposuction was the only option for millions of individuals struggling with pesky, unwanted fat deposits. While liposuction is an effective way to reduce fat cells, it is an invasive surgery with drawbacks and risks. For some people, those factors are enough to turn them away from the surgery. Thankfully, CoolSculpting is a non-invasive option for people who want to avoid surgical procedures, long recovery periods, and pain.

If you want to learn more about these fat reduction methods to determine which would be the right one for you, continue reading.

Liposuction Vs. CoolSculpting | Understanding the Difference in Procedure Experiences

While liposuction and CoolSculpting both achieve the same fat reduction, the procedure experiences are very different. For Liposuction, the specific procedure experience will depend on the target treatment area. The patient will be sedated with general anesthesia. Once this is accomplished, the surgeon will make small incisions in the skin with a scalpel. Next, the surgeon will stick a cannula or a tube with a sharp point and a suction device into the small incisions. The cannula helps to break up the fatty tissue. As the tissue breaks up, the surgeon will suction it out of the body through the cannula.

On the other hand, CoolSculpting is an entirely non-surgical fat reduction treatment. During this treatment, fat cells are exposed to a calibrated cooling technology known as Cryolipolysis. This scientifically proven science effectively freezes fat cells by exposing them to freezing temperatures. During the CoolSculpting treatment, the technician will use a proprietary applicator that administers the cold temperatures to the selected treatment area. The fat cells become frozen during this comfortable, 35-minute treatment without harming or damaging the surrounding skin or tissues. Once they are frozen, the fat cell's membrane ruptures, and it is unable to store fat. After the membrane ruptures, the cell is deemed useless, causing it to die and process out of the body naturally as a form of waste.

Liposuction vs. CoolSculpting | Cost

Liposuction costs, on average, about double the price of CoolSculpting treatment. According to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, liposuction treatments cost about $3,200. After you add in the operating room's cost and the anesthesiologist's cost, the total liposuction experience could cost over $5k. Compared to CoolSculpting prices, the difference is noticeable. According to a survey, the average cost of CoolSculpting is $2,400.

Liposuction vs. CoolSculpting | Recovery Process

When considering liposuction vs. CoolSculpting, you need to know the differences between the recovery process.

Liposuction recovery is considered lengthy. Patients are restricted in activity for 2 weeks. Each patient must also wear a compression garment for those two weeks. They can also experience bruising and swelling that lasts for several months. The full extent of liposuction results cannot be seen until the swelling subsides after the first few months.

CoolSculpting, however, has no recovery process. This simple, 35-minute treatment can be done on your lunch break as there is no downtime or recovery required.

CoolSculpting Near Me

While comparing the different fat reduction treatments, it is easy to see that CoolSculpting is the most comfortable, easy option.
