CoolTone Vs. Emsculpt

Your Best Solutions for Fat Reduction, Muscle Definition, or Both

With the number of muscle-strengthening techniques available today, it's no surprise that you'd feel some confusion trying to figure out which one is right for you.

The thing with using scientifically proven technology is that treatments can be completely customized for your individual concerns. Each body contouring device has its own unique strengths, so it's a matter of understanding how your body goals relate to what the machine can do.

Two of the most popular treatments are CoolTone and Emsculpt (or its updated version, Emsculpt NEO). You've asked, and we're here to tell. These top-ranking muscle-strengthening treatments face off below as we help you make a decision. Read on to learn more about each option, their similarities and differences, and anything else you need to know to make the best decision for your body.

The Similarities Between Emsculpt and CoolTone

Both CoolTone and Emsculpt are FDA-cleared to strengthen and tone major muscle groups. They achieve this muscle strengthening by stimulating powerful contractions known as supramaximal contractions. Each treatment is 30 minutes and induces 20,000 supramaximal contractions.

Some patients are happy with the results they see after one of either treatment option. Others tend to prefer scheduling anywhere between two and four sessions with at least two or three days between. The more sessions, the more dramatic the results.

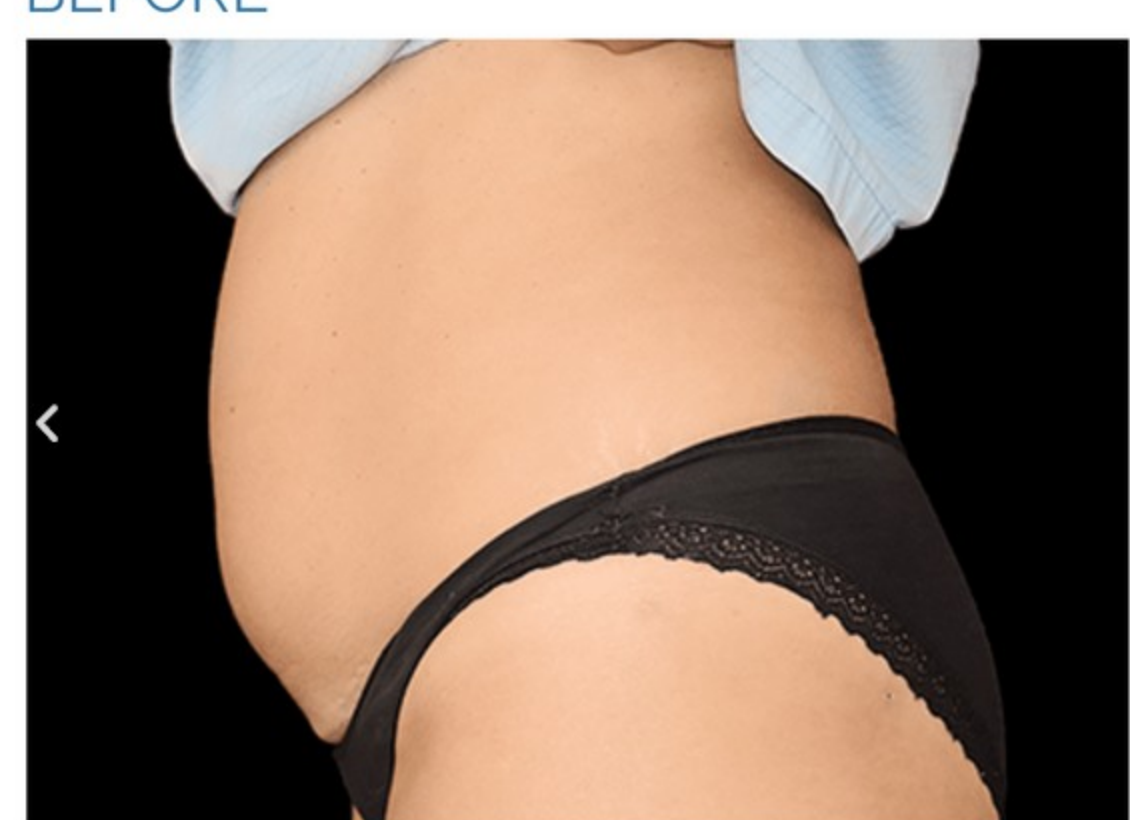

Regardless of which treatment you go with, either one brings more strength training than any person could achieve on their own. It's simply not humanly possible to build muscle cells and strengthen existing fibers that fast. You'd have to physically do 20,000 exercises that target the area you're hoping to tone, and even then, it's not guaranteed. Both CoolTone and Emsculpt provide minimal pain, and convenient treatments with no recovery time necessary.

The difference lies in how each device achieves optimal results, and which method you prefer.

Emsculpt Vs. CoolTone: The Differences

Each of these treatments came from a different manufacturer. Emsculpt comes from BTL Aesthetics, while CoolTone comes from the same makers of CoolSculpting, the revolutionary fat-freezing treatment.

Besides their origins, CoolTone and Emsculpt have significant differences, including:

Emsculpt Has Fat Reduction Capabilities

One of the main things that sets these services apart is the duality of what they provide. CoolTone can only strengthen muscles, although it achieves highly desirable results doing so. Emsculpt, on the other hand, can reduce fat in targeted areas, plus tone muscles for more definition.

For some patients, this duality is the perfect solution – slimming down excess fat and then strengthening existing muscle for the finale. For others, fat reduction isn't necessary. You might only need the extra help getting your muscles to tone. This gives you the flexibility to choose a treatment that only targets the areas you're looking to enhance.

Emsculpt Has More Time on the Market

Emsculpt was the first FDA-cleared device to strengthen and tone muscles. CoolTone made its way to the market a few years after that. While Emsculpt has some advantages by being available longer, CoolTone makes up for its lost time by being one of the most revolutionary muscle-strengthening treatments.

CoolTone Has Revolutionary Muscle-Strengthening Advancements

As you know, both treatments induce contractions in the muscle tissues. But how they achieve those contractions is completely separate from one another.

CoolTone uses Magnetic Muscle Stimulation (MMS), while Emsculpt uses Highly Focused Electromagnetic (HIFEM) energy. Emsculpt NEO takes its predecessor a step further by utilizing HIFEM energy and radiofrequency (RF) for additional fat cell death power. In studies monitoring patients that tried four rounds of Emsculpt or Emsculpt NEO, patients reported high satisfaction. There was an average of 2.0 mm increase in muscle thickness, a mean reduction of 2.8 mm (1/9 in) overall thickness.

CoolTone claims to have 50% more magnetic intensity measured in tesla (T) as compared to Emsculpt (1.35 T versus 0.9 T).

Each Targets Different Treatment Areas

CoolTone can strengthen the core, improving the abdominal muscles for firm results. It can also firm and strengthen the thighs and buttocks, providing a subtle lifting effect. This makes CoolTone a non-surgical butt lift alternative.

Emsculpt can do the same but is also cleared to effectively target other areas, so you can bring more definition to your:

- Abdomen, Buttocks, Arms, Calves, Thighs

Oftentimes, the choice of which treatment comes down to the area you want to define. But if you're hoping to target an area that both options cover, it comes down to what you'd like to see in your results – fat reduction, muscle toning, or both.

CoolSculpting Stomach: Freeze Tummy Fat & Redefine Your Abdomen

Belly fat is a common problem for millions of people around the world. Fat cells naturally gather in the lower stomach region. Despite living a healthy lifestyle by eating clean or exercising, you can still fall victim to stubborn belly fat.

It can be really difficult, if not impossible, to sculpt your stomach at home. Fortunately, there is a treatment for reducing belly fat without painful surgery or a complicated recovery. Stomach CoolSculpting offers a simple solution to a problem that millions of people struggle with daily.

What Causes Belly Fat in Females?

Estrogen directs the body to deposit more fat in the thighs, buttocks, and hips for women. As women age, their estrogen levels drop, causing fat to gather more commonly in the belly.

Metabolism for both men and women affects the belly. The metabolism begins to decline as our bodies get older, causing them to use fewer calories each day.

Belly Fat Solutions: CoolSculpting Upper and Lower Abdomen

Are you not seeing the fat reduction results you want despite going to the gym and eating healthy foods? CoolSculpting is a fantastic option if you need extra help to shed fat around your abdomen.

Individuals enjoy CoolSculpting benefits such as:

- Reducing the appearance of bulging skin or a potbelly
Enjoying better-fitting clothes
Feeling a surge in confidence
Eliminating stubborn fat to reveal a smooth surface
Fast lunchtime procedure
Long-lasting results

While CoolSculpting is not for weight loss or treating obesity, it can be effective at reducing fat deposits in your stomach. Many people choose this non-invasive procedure in their quest for a firm tummy and toned abs.

Of course, the stomach is not the only area that patients love to sculpt. There are nine areas in which you can use this fat-freezing treatment.

How to Maximize CoolSculpting Results on Stomach

Having realistic expectations and selecting the right CoolSculpting provider in Strongsville, OH, will help you get unmatched CoolSculpting stomach results.

Once you've had your CoolSculpting appointment, continue massaging the treatment area at home. This will help promote proper drainage as your body processes the frozen fat cells.

It's also crucial that you find a provider that has your best interests in mind. While many clinics and med spas offer CoolSculpting, not all providers are equal regarding expertise.

CoolSculpting Before and After Stomach

The number of CoolSculpting sessions you need depends on the amount of fat you want to remove. The recommended number varies from three to six, with the average being four sessions.

By scheduling a free initial consultation, find out how many CoolSculpting sessions your body needs. Then, a body sculpting expert at Strongsville's most prestigious medical spa, Docere Medical Spa and Laser Center, determines your candidacy and assesses your physique.

*As with any cosmetic procedure, CoolSculpting results vary per person. Some people see results quickly, while others may need more time. Results also differ depending on how many sessions you need.

CoolSculpting Vs. Tummy Tuck

Depending on the amount of fat you have, you might be a better candidate for a tummy tuck. When determining CoolSculpting candidacy, healthcare providers look for at least three inches of pinchable fat in the treatment area.

However, the difference in whether body contouring is right comes down to how much excess skin there is - if you have a belly with fat pockets/an area where fat gathers, CoolSculpting could work.

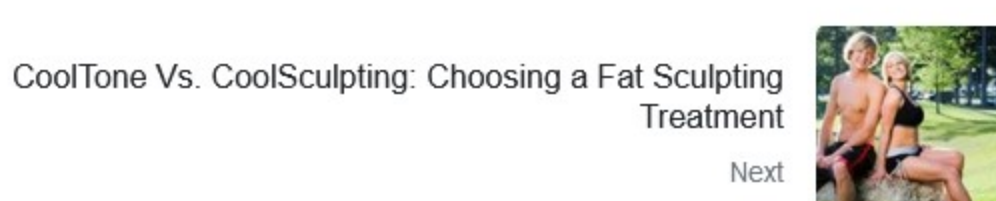

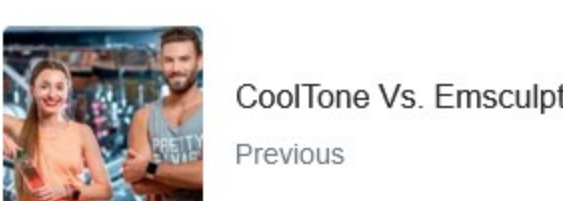

Try CoolSculpting in Strongsville, OH

CoolSculpting is a non-surgical fat reduction treatment. It uses targeted cooling to freeze and destroy fat cells. Patients enjoy CoolSculpting over invasive beauty procedures like liposuction or tummy tucks.

Docere Medical Spa and Laser Center is a top-tier provider specializing in CoolSculpting for the stomach. Men and women in Strongsville, Ohio, visit us for their body-shaping treatments.

CoolTone Vs. CoolSculpting: Choosing a Fat Sculpting Treatment

Finding the best available option might seem overwhelming if you're in the market for body contouring. Some treatments focus solely on reducing excess fat, while others build muscle and even skin texture. And you probably hear different recommendations, making it hard to figure out what is right for you.

When it comes to body contouring, CoolSculpting has always been in the chat. But it's no longer the only option. There are now newer, potentially better, treatments to choose from.

Two of the most popular options are CoolTone and CoolSculpting. It's common for people to confuse the two because their names are similar, and both are from Allergan (which might sound familiar as they also produce Botox). Both are highly effective, which is why so many people choose them. However, they do not work the same, and because of that, they achieve different results.

Targeting Fat Cells Vs. Muscle Tissue

The most significant difference between CoolSculpting and CoolTone is what each treatment focuses on. Both use a wand-like device similarly, but CoolTone's design targets muscle tissue. CoolTone develops muscle mass, sculpting and firming the treatment area to enhance areas of the body rather than slim.

CoolSculpting reduces fat in a specific area for visibly slimmer results. It's the favorite non-surgical alternative to liposuction, providing similar results without anesthesia, incisions, or downtime.

You might already be at or near your goal weight, but toning up is challenging. The gym can only provide so much, and sometimes the results simply aren't there. CoolTone can help with that. Or, you're committed to a healthy lifestyle, but certain areas stubbornly refuse to slim down. CoolSculpting can help with that. You can safely combine the treatments to target fat reduction and muscle building effectively.

How CoolSculpting Eliminates Stubborn Fat Pockets

CoolSculpting is the #1 fat reduction treatment. It is a popular alternative to liposuction because it reduces stubborn fat cells without invasive surgery. CoolSculpting uses a scientific process known as Cryolipolysis for freezing fat cells.

During treatment, the bulges of fat are subject to controlled cooling. This freezing process causes fat cells to harden and rupture. The fat cells can no longer do their job at this point, so they process out of the body as waste. As your CoolSculpting session finishes, your provider will gently massage the treatment area to help promote lymphatic drainage. There is no downtime necessary with CoolSculpting.

Once the fat cells are gone, they can never regrow, which is how CoolSculpting provides long-term results. Of course, that does not mean you can't still gain weight back. CoolSculpting removes only so many fat cells – there are still cells left in the treatment area that can expand. Maintaining a healthy and active lifestyle is essential to continue seeing transformative results.

You can always choose multiple CoolSculpting sessions to help boost results as you continue to eat well and exercise.

Multiple CoolSculpting Treatments

Many patients choose to schedule more than one CoolSculpting appointment for optimal results. If you decide on CoolSculpting, leave about 16 weeks between sessions to let the first round of Cryolipolysis work on the body. It takes time for results to show with this treatment. Each session provides up to 24% fat reduction, but the body needs to process and drain the dead fat cells.

There are many options for using more than one CoolSculpting treatment to boost results in the long term. Some try one session, give it several years, and return for another. This situation could be where you had one CoolSculpting treatment when you were younger, had a child, and are now looking to shed some fat. Others wait a bit between sessions but schedule them consecutively to maximize results.

It is possible to overdo it with CoolSculpting. If you have too many treatments, the area can look indented. That's why finding a trustworthy provider is crucial – the right one will help you establish a safe treatment plan, letting you know whether another session will help or hinder your progress.

CoolSculpting Before and After*

CoolSculpting works best on men and women who live healthy, active lives but still struggle with stubborn fat bulges. To be an ideal CoolSculpting candidate, you should already be within 10 pounds of your goal weight. There should be enough fat to pinch and hold onto, but not too much, as CoolSculpting is not a weight loss treatment.

As you can see from the below images, CoolSculpting reduces fat cells in notorious problem areas like:

- Lower abdomen
- Love handles
- Inner and outer thighs
- Upper arm fat

Depending on your goals, there is also a specific applicator known as CoolMini, which effectively targets double chins.

View more CoolSculpting before and after photos if you're still curious. Since everyone's body is different, it's interesting to see various results and imagine how your body might look post-treatment.

Whether you choose to eliminate unwanted fat through CoolSculpting first or are already near your goal weight, don't forget about the muscles! Toning up will help provide you with well-rounded results.

How CoolTone Builds Muscle Mass

CoolTone is a muscle-strengthening treatment that helps strengthen and firm your muscles. This treatment uses a magnetic muscle-stimulating machine that induces powerful muscle contractions.

One treatment can cause 20,000 supramaximal contractions. That's the equivalence of doing 20,000 squats, crunches, etc., to try to target an area. It's not physically possible to achieve these results on your own. The contractions help build and strengthen the abdomen, buttocks, and leg muscles.

After your session is complete, it's normal to feel fatigued. You'll likely feel as though you just hit the best gym session of your life the next day, but there is no recovery time necessary with CoolTone. You're free to get back to your routine right away.

Multiple CoolTone Sessions

Most patients see the best results with four treatments – two per week for two weeks. Then, maintenance appointments are typically every three to six months after your initial sessions are complete.

Of course, your treatment plan is entirely customizable with any reputable provider, meaning you can choose what will work for you. Some individuals don't find it necessary to schedule several sessions, while others prefer the transformative powers of each treatment building on the last one. CoolTone results are more temporary, making it easier to control treatments and ensure they don't go too far.

CoolTone Before and After*

This treatment is most suited for healthy men and women close to reaching their ideal body shape. The results of CoolTone are most apparent when not obscured by body fat.

Can You Use CoolTone and CoolSculpting Together?

Yes! Many patients choose to combine CoolTone and CoolSculpting treatments for more dramatic results strategically. They are known as sister treatments because they complement each other well. It's best to treat unwanted fat first with CoolSculpting and then tone that area with CoolTone.

For example, CoolSculpting will reduce belly fat, allowing the underlying muscles to show through when treating the lower stomach. Following this with CoolTone will further strengthen and tone the stomach muscles to give you hard abs. CoolSculpting magnifies CoolTone results and vice versa.

Another benefit of combining the body contouring treatment is the package deals with reputable medical spas. When done together, patients can save money on their overall treatment costs.
