Prolozone Therapy in St. Petersburg, FL

Prolozone therapy in St. Petersburg, FL is a treatment used to treat joint and back pain and osteoarthritis. It is a minimally invasive procedure. The Prolozone is administered via injection into the area of pain. Prolozone typically uses an anesthetic called procaine and a mixture of B vitamins (multi B vitamin, B12, folic acid), a homeopathic solution (Traumeel), dextrose (sugar water), and sodium bicarbonate. Ozone gas is injected after the Prolozone solution is injected.

What to Expect in St. Petersburg, FL

The expected outcome for Prolozone therapy is the regeneration of collagen for the rebuilding and strengthening of ligaments, tendons and cartilage.

Prolozone therapy has a proven track record of success and is practiced throughout the world to help patients with their painful back and joint conditions.

Typically, Prolozone treatments are performed 1-2 weeks apart. As a patient's condition improves, the time between treatments increases. The number of visits needed varies, based on each individual condition. A mild condition may require 1-4 visits, a moderate condition may require 5-8 visits and a more severe condition requires more than 8 visits. For each treatment, there must be improvement after a few treatments to justify continued treatment.
